FORMER PARISIAN CLAIMS REMARKABLE INVENTION

(Carlisle Mercury)

Tuesday morning a representative of The Mercury viewed a demonstration of the working model of a water-power machine, invented by Mr. M. A. Ritter, who is at present employed at the Neal Bakery in Carlisle.

Mr. Ritter, who was born in Germany, and came to this country in 1870, at the age of ten years, has been working on this machine for twenty-two years. He is still enthusiastic over the possibilities of the machine and to a layman, at least, his invention seems to have great possibilities.

The power is furnished by a five foot overshot wheel, of the type used in old water mills in past days. A small 1-8 horse power motor is used to start the two 3-inch cylinder pumps, which work alternately. The water is delivered to the overshot wheel, which revolves rapidly. A 24-inch drive wheel, attached to the overshot wheel is intended to furnish the power to operate a dynamo. The dynamo will furnish lights and at the same time charge a storage battery, from which the motor, the original power, can be operated indefinitely.

Mr. Ritter has in mind the furnishing of a cheap motive power for lighting country homes. His invention may also be used to heat a home. In fact he stated that he intended to put a machine in operation in Carlisle this fall, and furnish both heat and light to a local home.

The power developed by the machine, the inventor states, is contingent upon the size of the overshot wheel and the power of the pumps which furnish water to the wheel cups. Theoretically, at least, sufficient power might be developed to run large machinery.

The perfected machine will run on ball bearings, which will eliminate friction and also prolong the life of the machine. In fact the wearing parts is the only thing that can prevent it from lasting indefinitely.

As in the history of most inventions, Mr. Ritter has worked long and faced many disappointments. A patent was granted him in 1907, but a patent on an improved model was denied him in September, 1921, on the ground that the machine was an attempt at "perpetual motion."

Several substantial business men in Paris became interested in Mr. Ritter's invention, when he lived in that place, but the failure to secure a patent has prevented the perfection of a marketable machine.

The model now in Carlisle is in a rear room of the old Conley House, where Mr. Ritter will gladly demonstrate it to anyone who is interested. The mechanic might be able to find the flaw in this rather wonderful piece of mechanism, but, as has been observed, it appears most feasible to the layman.

DEVELOPING INTELLECTUAL GROWTH IN BOYS AND YOUNG MEN.

Alfred J. Westendorf, formerly of New York, now with the Babson Institute, Wellesley, Mass., where young men are trained for high executive positions, has earned an enviable reputation, through a hobby of his, as a developer of permanent "root" growth in boys and young men. He is one of those men who has time to think of and with others. Some of the magazines have referred to him as a national friend, others call him another Doctor Conwell or Judge Lindsay.

He possesses a very inquisitive mind when it comes to the welfare of young people. He is always wondering about what is being done and what might be done. During the past two years at his own expense and in his quiet way he has been carrying on a survey with reference to high school activities throughout the country. He wanted to know what they were thinking about and what they are doing. He found that practical school men everywhere were clamoring and craving for definite and concrete examples of school activities. That better ideas were in demand everywhere. To serve these people is the thing that urged him on in these investigations.

Mr. Westendorf found that lack of interest on the part of the pupils in many cases was due to lack of concentrated effort on the part of the school. That it was due to not having the work hung on a definite hook. He found that many schools by simply giving their present methods a new twist might become 1000% more productive. He found loads of schools carrying on splendid Thrift campaigns, but in Olathe, Kansas, for instance, the pupils are not simply urged to save, but are trained from the fifth grade up to prepare to meet their own graduation expense. It is not only a fine training, but unconsciously it tends to develop a desire to stay to the finish. It tends to eliminate the dropping out habit. It gives thrift an entirely new color.

In Birmingham, Mich., they are building up a Scholarship Fund, another fine example to follow. The ordinary variety of "honor roll" is common everywhere. In the Richmond, Indiana, High Schools they do it in a different way. They advertise the "honor boys" as "guaranteed boys." It creates an entirely different effect. These young men during their senior year are allowed to spend a part of their time without pay, associating and acquainting themselves with the things they hope to do after graduation. It gives them a practical opportunity to demonstrate their worth and it places them on a much better footing after graduation. This added kink doubles and trebles effort. We are told that if we are not trained to be workers, we unconsciously are being trained to be shirkers.

The Pierre Schools of South Dakota, are radiating a helpful influence over an unusually wide area. There are many rural children in that locality who cannot afford to go to Pierre for the entire school year. To meet the need, the high school teachers of Pierre cooperate with the rural teachers during the first half of the year, thus reducing the cost to these children by one-half. It is a plan that might be copied and duplicated very effectively in many other States and sections. Canton, Ohio, during the past school year attracted more than 4,000 people out of a population of 90,000 to its splendid night schools. In Richmond, Virginia, the second generation is commencing to reap the benefits of these special educational advantages. The Richmond schools are justly proud of the accomplishments of a certain mother in that city.

Mr. Westendorf's constructive investigations have aroused widespread interest. It has attracted the attention of the governors of Virginia and Texas, in fact public spirited people in general from coast to coast.

RELIGIOUS

A Resume of Events in Religious Circles For Present and Future

—A revival meeting, to be conducted at the Mt. Carmel Christian church, in this county, by Evangelist W. Graham Walker, will begin Sunday, July 23. Rev. Walker will be assisted by Prof. Leonard Daugherty, of Cincinnati, singing evangelist. There will be special music at each service. Service will begin each evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Walker is a former pastor of the Mt. Carmel church, serving from 1902 to 1905, when he was called as State Secretary of the Christian churches in North Carolina.

—The laying of the corner stone of the Methodist church at Nicholasville, will take place Sunday afternoon, July 22, at 3 o'clock, when services will be held. The records of the church show that the Methodist church was organized in Nicholasville in 1798 by Rev. John Metcalf, and the first church, a frame building, was erected and dedicated, during his pastorate, a year later. In latter years a frame union church was built, which was used by Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians. The Methodists built a brick church of their own in 1846, and this was dedicated in 1886 by Dr. H. C. Morrison, and which was destroyed by fire last December. While the church is under erection, services conducted by the pastor, Rev. Madison Combs, are being held at the court house.
